

Braxton Adams & Grant Gunderson
Mr. Harrison's Valentines Day Activity

Last week on Valentines day in Mr. Harrison's Spanish class his students had the opportunity to make valentines and tape them to the lockers. In hispanic culture, valentines day is the day of friendship and love. He emphasized that it was not just a day of love, but one where we should express kindness, and friendship to others. In his class we made kind notes to surprise other students with a compliment. The class had a lot of fun making valentines, and then got to go tape them up at the end of class. One student said, "It was a fun day, because we got to make other people happy."

Wouldn't you feel special if you heard everyone talking about these notes, and went to your locker to find one just for you? Not only was it very nice to everybody, but it also helped all the spanish classes to review simple phrases. All in all, it was a great day and it made a lot of people feel "feliz", or happy.

