

What makes Music popular?

By Paris Pray

You can see kids with an earbud hanging out one ear and a hand in their pocket often in the halls of Salem Junior High School. Your favorite song often labels you to others. What is the big deal about music? According to livescience.com it is often social influence. We have a miasma of music to choose from and we often rely on public opinion to choose what we listen to. It also seems that music with more emotion is more popular. We seem to relate or pretend to relate to the feelings in the music. Think on your favorite song, and you'll find that not only your music reflects what group you belong to, but also what you are feeling right then.
